President's Message

Bad News Good News

Perhaps you have heard the story about the parachutist who jumped from the plane only to discover that his chute did not open... That's the bad news. Fortunately, he had a reserve chute... That's the good news.

Unfortunately, it did not open either... That's the bad news. Much to his relief, he was falling toward a large bail of hay... That's the good news. His relief was short-lived when, as he got closer, he saw a large pitch fork sticking upright from the hay... That's the bad news.

He missed the pitch fork... That's the good news. The bad news... He missed the hay!

Fortunately, I have mostly good news to report to you. Mark your calendars for April 25-26. We have secured Dr. H. Wesley Clark, the director of SAMSHA as our plenary speaker followed by Dr. Bryce Hagadorn (University of Central Florida) who will continue the theme of families and addiction.

The plenary session on Saturday will be presented by Cynthia Moreno Tuohy, Executive Director of NAADAC followed by an additional session on Women and Addictions.

Early registration is encouraged. You will find a registration brochure enclosed in this issue of Connections.

This legislative session, an opportunity presented itself to introduce a licensure bill consistent with our long-standing position. We opted to withdraw the legislation upon the advice of our sponsor Rep. Peggy Welch (D) of Bloomington, however, she has agreed to represent our future efforts. It was helpful to learn more about the legislative process and we were pleased to discover where support seems to exist. Minor modifications and inter-organizational discussions regarding scope of practice appear manageable.

Some bad news exists, however, namely the continuation of misinformation. See FAQ's on page six.

As always, IAAP leadership will continue to respond openly and honestly...which is the good news.

Only our best,

Stewart Turner-Ball

Depressed Young Adults More Likely to Start Cigarette Smoking and Other Substance Use

Depressed Young Adults More Than Twice As Likely To Begin Using Illicit Drugs Than Those Not Suffering from Depression

A new report indicates that young adults who have suffered from depression within the past year are at a higher risk of initiating substance use including cigarette smoking and use of alcohol or illicit drugs. The findings, based on the largest national survey on substance use and health, were reported today by the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA).

The release of this report coincides with the Great American Smokeout – a national observance in support of being free of tobacco use and addiction. The data from the report highlight the relationship between depression and the impulse to begin smoking in young adults.

Depression and the Initiation of Cigarette, Alcohol, and Other Drug Use among Young Adults indicates that 9.4 percent of people aged 18 to 25, or approximately 3 million young adults in the United States experienced one or more major depressive episodes in the past year.

The National Survey on Drug Use and Health (NSDUH), the source for this report, defines a major depressive episode as a period of two weeks or longer during which there is depressed mood or loss of interest or pleasure and the presence of at least four other symptoms that reflect a change in functioning. These include problems with sleep, eating, energy, concentration and self-image. This definition is consistent with the one used by the American Psychiatric Association.

“Today is the Great American Smokeout – a day when we pause to recognize ongoing efforts to draw attention to the health benefits of avoiding cigarettes,” said SAMHSA Administrator Terry Cline, Ph.D. “This study clearly reveals that too often people turn to cigarettes or other substances to try to deal with depression, creating a double jeopardy for their health and well-being.”

Among the report’s notable findings were that young adults experiencing major depressive episodes within the past year were:

- Approximately 60 percent more likely to have initiated cigarette use than those in their age group who had not experienced depression in the past year (12.7 versus 7.8 percent, respectively).

- Approximately 35 percent more likely to have initiated alcohol use than those in their age group who had not experienced depression in the past year (33.7 versus 24.8 percent).

- Twice as likely to have initiated use of an illicit drug as those in their age group who had not experienced depression in the past year (12.0 versus 5.8 percent).

- Twice as likely to start abusing pain relief medication than were their contemporaries who had not experienced recent depression (7.1 versus 2.8 percent).

The report is also notable because of the size of the database — nearly 135,000 interviews with persons aged 12 or older, including almost 45,000 young adults – and it was conducted during the course of the 2005 and 2006 NSDUH surveys. This database is one of the largest and most detailed of its kind.

The full report, including detailed information on demographic groups and types of substance abuse, is available on the Web at <http://oas.samhsa.gov/2k7/newusers/depression.cfm>. Copies may be obtained free of charge by calling SAMHSA’s Health Information Network at 1-877-SAMHSA-7 (1-877-726-4727). Request inventory number NSDUH07-1115. New Report Provides Startling Look At Substance Abuse On An Average Day In The Life Of American Adolescents

Number of Adolescents Using Marijuana on an Average Day Vastly Exceeds Half of the Number of All Students Registered in New York City Schools

On an average day, nearly 1.2 million teenagers smoked cigarettes, 631,000 drank, and 586,000 used marijuana, according to the latest data, in a first-of-a kind report from the Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration (SAMHSA).

The report, which highlights the substance abuse behavior and addiction treatment activities that occur among adolescents on an average day, draws on national surveys conducted and analyzed by SAMHSA's Office of Applied Studies.

The report, A Day in the Life of American Adolescents: Substance Use Facts, presents a stark picture of the daily toll substance abuse takes on America's young.

Among the report's major findings is that on any given day during 2006 nearly 1.2 million adolescents ages 12 to 17 smoked cigarettes, 631,000 drank alcohol, 586,000 used marijuana. In addition, each day nearly 50,000 adolescents used inhalants, 27,000 used hallucinogens, 13,000 used cocaine and 3,800 used heroin.

To provide some perspective on these figures, the nationwide number of adolescents using marijuana on an average day equals more than half the total number of students enrolled in New York City's public school system during the 2006-07 school year.

"While other studies have shown that significant progress has been made in lowering the levels of substance abuse among young people in the last few years, this report shows many young people are still engaging in risky behavior," said SAMHSA Administrator Terry Cline, Ph.D.

Cline spoke at the Double Jeopardy CASACONFERENCE on co-occurring substance abuse and mental health disorder in young people at The National Center on Addiction and Substance Abuse at Columbia University.

"By breaking the data down and analyzing it on a day-to-day basis, we gain a fresh perspective on how deeply substance abuse pervades the lives of many young people and their families," Cline said.

The report also sheds light on how many adolescents ages 12 to 17 used illegal substances for the first time. On an average day in 2006:

- Nearly 8,000 adolescents drank alcohol for the first time;
 - Approximately 4,300 adolescents used an illicit drug for the first time;
 - Around 4,000 adolescents smoked cigarettes for the first time;
 - Nearly 3,600 adolescents used marijuana for the first time; and
 - Approximately 2,500 adolescents abused pain relievers for the first time.
- The report also analyzes the most recent available data to indicate how many people under age 18 were receiving treatment for a substance abuse problem during an average day in 2005. These numbers included:
- Over 76,000 in outpatient treatment,
 - More than 10,000 in non-hospital residential treatment, and
 - Over 1,000 in hospital inpatient treatment.

This report was drawn from SAMHSA's National Survey on Drug Use and Health, Treatment Episode Data Set and the National Survey of Substance Abuse Treatment Services, and contains many other important facts about adolescent substance abuse, treatment and treatment admissions patterns.

The full report is available at <http://oas.samhsa.gov/2k7/youthFacts/youth.cfm>. Copies may be obtained free of charge by calling SAMHSA's Health Information Network at 1-877-SAMHSA-7 (1-877-726-4727). For related publications and information, visit www.samhsa.gov

Frequently Asked Questions

What are the benefits of joining IAAP?

Advocacy of the addiction profession at both the State and National levels, reduced costs associated with certification, conferences, workshops.

Do non-degreed addiction counselors have a place in IAAP?

Absolutely

Do recovering counselors have a place in IAAP?

Yes. Many recovering counselors are already IAAP members, in fact, at least 50% of IAAP's leadership are recovering.

Does IAAP support licensure of counselors not having a Masters degree in a Human Services field?

Yes; however, a Masters degree in this field is necessary to be able to practice independently though clinical supervision is suggested.

Why is it necessary to obtain a Masters degree in a Human Services related field?

In order to provide counseling as a clinical social worker, marriage & family therapist, or mental health counselor, one must meet the current established standards in Indiana, which includes a Masters degree in the specific discipline of practice. IAAP believes addiction professionals must also operate within one's Scope of Practice. Additionally, Indiana Code 25 prohibits a non-Master-level clinician providing an assessment and psychotherapy.

What is required to renew my certification?

60 hours of education and/or training in which 30 of those hours are in a specific addiction discipline (i.e. alcohol, drugs, gambling, sexual). The remaining 30 hours may be in other subject areas pertaining to human services and must include 4 hours of ethics training.
